Description

Provide a short description of the event and its activities.

In November, we completed a green commemoration of a grub and a forest hideout in the town of Głodno (Łaziska commune). Thanks to our cooperation with landscape architect Natalia Budnik, we marked the location of the dugout/burial with plants so that it would fit into the local landscape. There were at least several hideouts in the forest near Głodno and Niedźwiada Mała, where both Jews from nearby towns and those who came here from afar tried to survive the Holocaust. According to the information we have, in the hideout that we commemorated together with the local community on November 14, 2024, escapees from the ghetto in Opole Lubelskie were hiding. The hideout was probably discovered in the spring of 1943, during a German raid, and the 10 people hiding there, among them women and men, including a mother with an adult daughter, were murdered and buried right next to the place that was supposed to be their shelter.

The commemoration ceremony in Głodno is the culmination of several years of cooperation with the local community. In 2020, we met with the Mayor of the Łaziska Commune and representatives of the forest district, with whom we talked about commemorating this location and established cooperation. The local authorities and the forest district were involved and engaged in the entire preparatory and conceptual process of the commemoration project.

In 2021, we conducted workshops with an intergenerational group of Łaziska residents in the Communal Library and the Culture Center in Łaziska, with whom we made a wooden marker. This year, just before the ceremony, we met again and in the same place with the residents of Łaziska, among them people who remember the meeting from three years ago.

On November 14, 2024, during the unveiling of the monument/tombstone, together with the local community, we commemorated 10 people of Jewish nationality. The ceremony was attended by residents, youth and teachers from four nearby schools, representatives of institutions, local and regional authorities and the clergy, the rabbi, bishop and parish priest of Łaziska, representatives of the Volunteer Fire Department.
